

Johnson Ford on the Gasconade River near Vienna. Courtesy of John F. Bradbury.

Cave Lodge on the Gasconade River, Schicht, Mo.

Life was leisurely at Cave Lodge in horse and buggy days. Courtesy of John F. Bradbury.

Students in front of Freedom School in Camden County in the late 1940's. (Front, left to right)--Roseltha Hurley, unidentified, Nelda Molt, Raymond Molt and J.M. Wallis. (Middle, left to right)--Betty Hurley, Bessie Jeffries, Grace Molt, Millie Wallis, and Helen Jeffries. (Back, left to right)--Ruth A. Shipman, Dale Morris, Hazel McDowell (teacher), Gail Scott and Johnnie Jeffries. Courtesy of Millie Brotherton.

Enjoying tea and company in Molly Ballew's backyard on South Benton Street in Waynesville in August 1961 were left to right: Josie Wilson, Molly Ballew, Irene Morgan, Jen Etta Browne, Lula Christeson, Bess Wyrick, Faye Mitchell, Grace Wyrick and Ruth Rollins. Fronia Goforth is in the foreground with her back to the camera. Courtesy of Maxine Farnham.

1907 Street Scene of Dixon. Courtesy of Lewis and Carol Miller.

A day at Gasconade Spring was always pleasurable even back on October 19, 1910, when this photo was taken at "Gaskanade Spring". The message on back of the unaddressed card reads, "This is a spring by the side of the river. You can see the ind of the boat in the river." Courtesy of John F. Bradbury.

A view of Hooker, Missouri, in bygone days. Squire Wells Store with cars of customers parked in front is on the far right. Courtesy of Tom Miller.

Eldon's old railroad depot. Courtesy of Sue Hansen.

Students took a break from classes to pose in everyday school clothes for a rare informal photograph taken in front of Hooker School in the spring of 1913. Courtesy of Tom Miller.

People assemble in Dixon to observe "Cow Days". Courtesy of Lewis and Carol Miller.

Students dressed in their finest for this formal March 7, 1910, Hooker School photograph. Among the students were Roy Miller, front row left, Ella Miller, sixth from the left in the second row; Harry Miller, third row left; and Squire Wells, third row right. Courtesy of Tom Miller.