From the Editors:

Welcome to the 2022 edition of the Old Settlers Gazette. It is the nineteenth issue published by the Old Stagecoach Stop Foundation. This heritage publication is made possible by the advertisers herein. The ad revenue not only makes a free issue possible, but it also provides funds that help maintain Pulaski County's oldest publicly accessible building—the Old Stagecoach Stop House Museum.

Past issues of the Old Settlers Gazette are available for viewing or PDF download on the Foundation's web site: www.oldstagecoachstop.org. Click "Gazette Archive" for an index.

Originally a school located on the other side of Hooker Creek, the century-plus Hooker Church remains largely unchanged, a good example for our feature "Old Pulaski Then and Now." Old Stagecoach Stop volunteers are: ladies (l-r) Pam Barnabee, Kelly Howley, Jeanie Porter, and Kitty McKelvey; men (l-r) Terry Primas and Mark Zurbrick. Volunteers not pictured are Jan Primas, Stephanie Nutt, Dave Edie, Joy Bolduc, and Marge Connor.

Coming in August

Waynesville, Missouri, county seat of Pulaski County, began the decade of the 1940s with a population of 468 citizens. The only paved street in the small village was Route 66 on the south side of the town square. There were no city utilities nor health services, except the local doctor. Then came the construction of Fort Leonard Wood. Before the decade was over, the rustic village was transformed into a modern Ozark town. This is the story of that transformation.
